Athena

This Goddess was a supreme entity worshipped by most ancient Greeks and then Romans but she is also loved by many people of today's world. Her Roman name was Minerva. Athena was associated with war craft and she could find the road to victory in any battle/war. She was also related to heroism, counsel, weaving and pottery. Athena's relation to the olive tree and olive oil is well known by most people of the western civilization. Her parents were King Zeus and Titanis Metis but many historians claim that she had no mother but only a father (Zeus). Athena was a virgin goddess and she had no children. She was an entity who owned deep wisdom and she was associated with the Owl and the Crow, two powerful birds she created. Athena appeared with a battle helmet and a lethal spear. She was the protector of the city of Athens.
