ATHENA

This goddess was a supreme entity worshipped by most ancient Greeks and then Romans but she is also loved by many people of today's world. Her Roman name was Minerva. Athena was associated with the art of war and she could find the road to victory in any battle/war. She was also related to heroism, counsel, weaving and pottery. Athena's relation to the Olive tree and Olive oil is well known by most people of the Western civilization. Her parents were King Zeus and Titanis Metis but many historians claim that she had no mother but only a father (Zeus). Athena was a virgin goddess and she had no children. She was an entity who owned deep wisdom and she was associated with the Owl and the Crow, two powerful birds she created. Athena appeared with a battle helmet, a shield and a lethal spear. She was the protector of the city of Athens.

POSEIDON

This major god was very important as it was related to the waters of planet Earth. The roman name for Poseidon is Neptune. Poseidon was king of the seas and rivers, waterfalls but he was also associated with earthquakes along with another Greek god named Encelados. Poseidon's father was the titan Kronos and his mother was the titanis Rhea. He was married to a beautiful goddess named Amphitrite. They had several children. One of them was the powerful Triton. Poseidon created many animals on Earth like many fish species, the Horse (he created it along with Hermes) and the Dolphin. In the seas, Poseidon created his favorite plant the Seaweed. He was also associated with the Pine tree. Poseidon owned a powerful weapon, the Trident with which he could outsmart his enemies.

ARES

This god is one of the most powerful entities of ancient times. The Romans called him Mars and he was the god of war and battle. Ares was associated with manliness. His parents were King Zeus and Queen Hera. He was the spouse of goddess Aphrodite. Together they gave birth to many powerful entities like Deimos (Death in battle) and Phobos (Fear). Aphrodite, who was the goddess of love and sex, used to make Ares very jealous by having sexual relationships with other entities like with god Hephaistos. Ares was related to many animals (especially serpents) like the Vulture, the Eagle Owl and the Woodpecker. It is said the he created the plant Manna Ash. Ares appeared in the same way as goddess Athena (wearing a war helmet and carrying a shield and a spear).

APHRODITE

This powerful goddess was mostly associated with love, beauty and sex. The Romans called her Venus. She is one of the most famous goddesses of the ancient Greek world. Aphrodite had the ability to offer pleasure and she was also related to procreation. The legend tells us that she was born out of the sea foam but it is very likely that her parents were King Zeus and Titanis Dione. Aphrodite was first married to Ares and later to Hephaistos. Eros (winged godling of love) was one of her most notable children but she also gave birth to many other offspring. Aphrodite was related to many animals like the Turtle, the Dove, the Goose, the Hare and the Sparrow. Plants associated with this supreme goddess were the Apple tree, the Lettuce, the Rose, the Myrtle, the Myrrh tree and the Anemone.

HERMES

Hermes was another very important god of the Greek Pantheon. The Romans called him Mercury. He was associated with many things (more things than any other god). For example he was responsible for trade, travel and communications three important aspects of life and civilization. Moreover Hermes was related to the human and animal tongue and all languages. He was the herald of the gods and he could bring good luck to his followers. Greeks believed that Hermes was guiding the dead into their journey in the afterlife. His parents were King Zeus and the Nympe Maia (Taurus constellation). Hermes did not like marriage very much and as a result he had no spouse. But he gave birth to many important entities like Pan. Animals associated with Hermes were the Tortoise, the Sheep, the Hawk and the Cattle. Plants related to him were the Crocus and the Strawberry. He used to appear with his herald rod.
